COLDWATER-GEYSER
There is a short walk, approx. 250 metre, to the place where the geyser erupts. After a few minutes, your patience will be rewarded as the geyser shoots water up to 60 metres into the air. After the eruption, the boat takes you back to Andernach.
EXHIBITION
— your adventure begins here.

An old mine, a team of researchers, a ride into the depths of the Earth, slate caves, volcanic rocks — all this awaits visitors to this exciting exhibition about a rare natural phenomenon: the cold-water geyser.

In order to uncover the mystery of the cold-water geyser and its connection with the volcanism of the Eifel, you are taken to a place where it feels like you are 4,000 metres below the surface of the Earth. This is because the answers to many of the questions about the formation of the cold-water geyser and how it works lie hidden in the depths of the Earth.

The scenery of the various rooms creates a very realistic impression of what it’s like deep down in the Earth. The exhibits lure people into trying things out, playing, and learning. Information about the geyser and the volcanism is clearly presented in English and German on panels with graphics to illustrate the easily understandable text. You can learn, play, and explore with all your senses.

Tip:
At the end of the tour you return to the Earth’s surface, where the coffee bar invites you to linger before making your way by boat to the geyser.
TICKETS/VISIT
Tickets for visiting the geyser are available in the Geyser Centre only and must be picked up from the ticket office no later than 10 minutes before the boat departs. All tickets include entry (once only) to the exhibition, the boat trip, and entry to the geyser site to see an eruption of the geyser.
You should allow approximately 3.5 hours for the entire visit.

No dogs or pets (except guide dogs/assistance dogs) are allowed into the exhibition at the Geyser Centre or at Namedyer Werth (the site of the eruption of the geyser).
